

Enhancing the value of climate data - translating risk and uncertainty utilizing a living labs approach

Mid-term Consortium Meeting

On the 13th and 14th of March a consortium meeting was held for the EVOKE researchers and participating case study partners at the Provincial house of the Dutch city of Den Bosch.

This meeting also marked the half-way point for the EVOKE project duration, as well as a chance to meet one another face-to-face since the kick-off meeting in Gothenburg in November 2017.

The main goal of the meeting was to apply the information design framework to identify potential climate services for each of the case study sites. Dutch stakeholders joined the second day of the meeting to discuss experiences and this was followed by a learning excursion as we visited the urban and rural area of Den Bosch.
